

doc-canon-protestant-66

Affirms · Bibliology › Canon · doctrine · divided_lineages · confidence: medium

Statement under examination

The Christian canon comprises the 39 Hebrew Old Testament books and the 27 New Testament books.

Rationale

Luke 24:44 names the tripartite Hebrew canon (νόμος / προφήται / ψαλμοί, G3551/G4396/G5568), matching the Tanakh that the Jewish community of Jesus' day enumerated as 22 or 24 scrolls equivalent to the 39 books reckoned by Christian division; Luke 11:51 brackets righteous-blood from Abel (Gen 4) to Zechariah (2 Chr 24:20-22), tracing the canonical span Genesis-to-Chronicles which fits the Hebrew Tanakh ordering rather than the Septuagintal-Catholic ordering ending in Malachi; Rom 3:2 places the λόγια τοῦ θεοῦ (G3051) custodianship with Israel, whose enumerated Hebrew Scriptures are the 39 OT books; 2 Pet 3:16 classifies Paul's letters as τὰς λοιπὰς γραφάς (G1124), placing apostolic writings inside the γραφή category alongside the OT; the 27-book NT is established by apostolic-origin / apostolic-association criteria received in patristic enumeration (Athanasius Festal Letter 39, 367 AD). However Scripture itself nowhere lexically enumerates 'these 66 books and no others'; the verdict is a Protestant historical settlement standing on Jewish canonical enumeration plus apostolic-association criteria, not on a single canonical proof-text.

Reasoning

Yes for the 66-book Protestant settlement, but this is one of those questions where Scripture itself does not give a list of which books belong in Scripture. The strongest reasons from the Bible point in this direction. In Luke 24:44 Jesus tells his disciples that everything written about him in the Law of Moses, the Prophets, and the Psalms had to be fulfilled. That three-part reference matches the Hebrew Bible the Jewish community of his day was already using, which lines up with the 39 books Protestants count as the Old Testament. In Luke 11:51 Jesus speaks of the righteous blood shed from Abel to Zechariah, which traces a path from the first book of the Hebrew Bible (Genesis) to the last (Chronicles in the Jewish ordering), reading like a bookend reference to the whole Hebrew canon. In Romans 3:2 Paul says the Jews were entrusted with the oracles of God, which points to the Hebrew Scriptures the Jewish community recognized. For the New Testament, 2 Peter 3:16 groups Paul's letters together with the other Scriptures, already treating apostolic writings as Scripture during the apostolic age itself. The strongest counterargument also comes from inside the Bible. Jude verses 14 and 15 directly quote 1 Enoch, a book the Protestant canon does not include, and calls Enoch's words a prophecy. The New Testament writers often quote the Old Testament from a Greek translation of the Jewish Scriptures that circulated in the first century, and that Greek collection included books like Tobit, Judith, Wisdom, Sirach, Baruch, and 1 and 2 Maccabees, books Catholics and Eastern Orthodox keep in their Bibles. And no verse in Scripture lists which 66 books are in and which are out. The honest handling is this. Scripture grounds a strong case that the Hebrew Bible the Jewish community used is the Old Testament and that the apostolic writings are the New Testament. But the precise count of 66 is a historical settlement reached after the Reformation, anchored to Jerome's argument that only the Hebrew books should count as Old Testament canon. The Bible itself does not say in so many words that exactly these 66 books and no others belong. So a Christian who accepts a wider Old Testament canon is reading the same Bible plus some additional books, not denying the gospel.

Denominational landscape

Christians genuinely disagree about how many books belong in the Bible. Protestants count 66 books, 39 Old Testament and 27 New Testament. Roman Catholics count 73 books, adding what Catholics call the deuterocanonical books to the Old Testament: Tobit, Judith, Wisdom, Sirach, Baruch, 1 and 2 Maccabees, plus additional passages in Esther and Daniel. The Council of Trent in 1546 formally defined this canon for Catholics. Eastern Orthodox churches count even more, generally 76 or more books, adding 1 Esdras, Prayer of Manasseh, 3 Maccabees, and treating 4 Maccabees as an appendix in some traditions, all called the Anagignoskomena, meaning those that are read. The Ethiopian Orthodox Tewahedo Church has an even broader canon that includes 1 Enoch and Jubilees. All three traditions, Protestant, Catholic, and Orthodox, agree on the same 27-book New Testament, with the canonical list found in Athanasius's Festal Letter 39 in the year 367 being the earliest surviving full enumeration. The Protestant 66-book settlement was sharpened during the Reformation as Reformers followed Jerome in distinguishing the Hebrew-language Old Testament from the Greek-only deuterocanonical books, calling those latter books Apocrypha, useful for reading but not for establishing doctrine. The Anglican 39 Articles state this position plainly. Lutheran and Reformed confessions affirm the same 66-book extent. Methodist and Anabaptist traditions follow the Protestant settlement. Pentecostal traditions like the Assemblies of God hold the 66-book canon. The Catholic and Orthodox positions are ancient and held by the majority of Christians worldwide today, so the disagreement about canon extent is not a gospel-stake or cult-marker question. It is a serious historical-theological disagreement within Christianity. By contrast, public-record movements that add entirely new revelatory writings as binding alongside or above Scripture, like Mormonism with the Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and Pearl of Great Price, or Christian Science with Mary Baker Eddy's Science and Health, fall outside historic Christianity on the canon-closed question, which is handled separately.

Position thresholds

Would die for if challenged	No
Cult marker if denied	No
Would visit if otherwise	Yes
Would participate if otherwise	Yes
Would serve if otherwise	No
Would be member if otherwise	No
Would let children be taught otherwise	Yes
Would marry if held otherwise	Yes
Would publicly correct if otherwise	No

Notes

The 66-book Protestant canon is a confessional settlement, not a Scripture-lexical demonstration. Scripture does not enumerate its own table of contents. The Protestant settlement rests on (a) Jesus' tripartite reference in Luke 24:44 to the Tanakh, (b) the Abel-to-Zechariah bracket in Luke 11:51 tracing the Hebrew canonical span ending at Chronicles, (c) Romans 3:2 placing canonical custody with the Jewish community whose Tanakh enumeration is historically attested by Josephus (Contra Apionem 1.8, 22 books) and the Talmudic baraita Bava Batra 14b-15a, and (d) Jerome's Hebraica veritas argument in his Prologus Galeatus distinguishing canonical Hebrew books from deuterocanonical apocrypha. Catholics (73 OT+NT including Tobit, Judith, Wisdom, Sirach, Baruch, 1-2 Maccabees, plus additions to Esther and Daniel) and Eastern Orthodox (76+ books including the above plus 1 Esdras, Prayer of Manasseh, 3 Maccabees, with 4 Maccabees as appendix in some traditions, the Anagignoskomena 'those that are read') receive a wider OT canon on the basis of the Septuagint-receiving early church. Their position is defensible and ancient; they are not cults. Denying the Protestant 66-book settlement in favor of the Catholic or Orthodox wider canon is an intra-Christian dispute about extent, not a gospel-stake. By contrast, ADDING entirely new revelatory documents that function as rule-of-faith alongside or above Scripture (Mormonism's Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, Pearl of Great Price; Christian Science's Science and Health; Unification Church's Divine Principle; Branhamism's recorded sermons-as-spoken-word) is handled under doc-canon-closed and is a cult-marker question. The current question is narrower: the specific 66-book Protestant extent versus the wider Catholic and Orthodox canons. On that question I affirm the Protestant settlement but cannot make denial a cult-marker because Scripture itself does not lexically enumerate 66 books, and the historic Catholic and Orthodox churches that hold a wider canon remain Christian.

Stem audit

verdict-preloaded: no

Hermeneutics

Primary method. grammatico-historical

Frameworks in play. covenant_theology, dispensationalism, new_covenant_theology, catholic_magisterial, eastern_orthodox analogia scripturae invoked · progressive revelation factor

Competing lens verdicts

covenantal · affirms: Reads Luke 24:44, Luke 11:51, and Romans 3:2 as locating the OT canon in the Hebrew Tanakh entrusted to Israel; 2 Peter 3:16 places apostolic letters in the Scripture category; the Protestant 66-book settlement is the natural reading dispensational · affirms: Same affirmation; the Hebrew-Tanakh-plus-apostolic-writings framing fits the dispensational reading of distinct OT and NT canonical bodies; no dispensational distinctive at stake on canon extent

new_covenant_theology · affirms: Same affirmation as covenantal on this point; canon extent is not a covenantal-vs-new-covenantal flashpoint catholic_magisterial · denies: Reads the early-church reception of the Septuagint as canonical (with deuterocanonical books); appeals to Hebrews 11:35 as Maccabean allusion, to Christological prefiguration in Wisdom, and to the Council of Trent 1546 definition; receives 46 OT books plus 27 NT = 73 books eastern_orthodox · denies: Receives the Anagignoskomena 'those that are read' beyond the Hebrew 39, including 1 Esdras, Prayer of Manasseh, 3 Maccabees, with regional variation on 4 Maccabees and Psalm 151; canon scope set by liturgical use and patristic reception rather than by Hebraica veritas

The canon-extent question is genuinely contested across major Christian lineages because Scripture itself does not lexically enumerate its table of contents. The Protestant 66-book settlement rests on (a) the tripartite-Hebrew-Tanakh references in Luke 24:44 and Matthew 5:17, (b) the Genesis-to-Chronicles bracket in Luke 11:51, (c) Romans 3:2 entrusting the oracles to Israel, and (d) Jerome's Hebraica veritas argument plus Reformation-era retrieval. The Catholic and Orthodox positions rest on the apostolic-era use of the Septuagint, allusions like Hebrews 11:35 to 2 Maccabees, and continuous patristic-liturgical reception. Analogia scripturae is invoked because no single passage settles the count. Progressive revelation factors because the question implicitly concerns the terminus of OT revelation and the recognition of NT writings during the apostolic age.

Scripture (apparatus + interlinear)

Luke.24.44 · for · genre: gospel

Key term. νόμῳ Μωϋσέως καὶ τοῖς προφήταις καὶ ψαλμοῖς (nomō Mōuseōs kai tois prophētais kai psalmois) G3551/G4396/G5568

Force. Jesus enumerates the tripartite Hebrew canonical structure (Torah, Prophets, Writings represented by Psalms as the lead book of the Writings); this matches the Jewish enumeration of 22 or 24 scrolls equivalent to the Protestant 39 OT books; supports the Hebrew-Tanakh framing of the OT, which is the lexical floor of the Protestant settlement

Luke.11.51 · for · genre: gospel

Key term. ἀπὸ τοῦ αἵματος Ἀβελ ἕως τοῦ αἵματος Ζαχαρίου (apo tou haimatos Habel heōs tou haimatos Zachariou) G129/G6/G2197

Force. Jesus brackets righteous-blood from Abel (Genesis 4) to Zechariah son of Berechiah, identified with the priest Zechariah son of Jehoiada whose murder is recorded in 2 Chronicles 24:20-22; the Hebrew Tanakh ends with Chronicles, so the Abel-to-Zechariah bracket reads as a Genesis-to-Chronicles canonical-span reference equivalent to 'from the first OT martyr to the last'; the bracket presupposes a Hebrew Tanakh-ordered canon, not a Septuagintal ordering ending in Malachi or one extending into Maccabees

Rom.3.2 · for · genre: epistle

Key term. ἐπιστεύθησαν τὰ λόγια τοῦ θεοῦ (episteuthēsan ta logia tou Theou) G4100/G3051/G2316

Force. λόγια ('oracles, divine utterances') is the inheritance entrusted (ἐπιστεύθησαν, aorist passive of πιστεύω) to the Jewish community; the lexical force places canonical custody of the OT with Israel, whose enumeration was the Hebrew Tanakh; this is a load-bearing reason Protestant Reformers (and Jerome before them) argued for the Hebrew-canon-only OT

2Pet.3.15-16 · for · genre: epistle

Key term. τὰς λοιπὰς γραφάς (tas loipas graphas) G1124

Force. Peter classes Paul's epistles alongside τὰς λοιπὰς γραφάς ('the rest of the Scriptures'); the term γραφή (Strong's 1124) is the standard NT lemma for OT Scripture; placing Paul's letters in that category demonstrates apostolic-era recognition of NT writings as Scripture in the same class as the OT; supports the 27-book NT in principle (apostolic writings are γραφή) though does not enumerate which 27

2Tim.3.15-16 · for · genre: epistle

Key term. ἱερὰ γράμματα... πᾶσα γραφή θεόπνευστος (hiera grammata... pasa graphē theopneustos) G2413/G1121/G1124/G2315

Force. ἱερὰ γράμματα ('sacred writings') in 3:15 refers to the Jewish Scriptures Timothy knew from childhood, which would have been the Hebrew canon as received in the Jewish community of his day; 3:16 claims inspiration for all γραφή; the lexical pattern affirms inspired Scripture as a class but does not lexically enumerate which books belong

Jude.1.14-15 · complicates · genre: epistle

Key term. προεφήτευσεν... Ἐνὼχ (proephēteusen... Henōch) G4395/G1802

Force. Jude quotes verbatim from 1 Enoch 1:9 and introduces the citation with προεφήτευσεν (aorist active of προφητεύω, 'prophesied'); 1 Enoch is not in the Protestant or Catholic or mainstream-Orthodox canon (though it is canonical in the Ethiopian Orthodox Tewahedo Church); the citation complicates a clean 66-book settlement because a canonical NT book quotes an extra-canonical book and attributes prophetic status to its content; the standard Protestant harmonization is that Jude affirms the truth of the cited content without canonizing the source-book, parallel to Paul citing pagan poets (Aratus, Epimenides, Menander)

Acts.7.14 · complicates · genre: narrative

Key term. ἐν ψυχαῖς ἑβδομήκοντα πέντε (en psychais hebdomēkonta pente) G1440/G4002

Force. Stephen reports Jacob's family entering Egypt as 75 souls, matching the Greek Septuagint reading of Genesis 46:27 and Exodus 1:5; the Hebrew Masoretic Text reads 70 souls; demonstrates that NT speakers and writers cite from Greek-Septuagintal text-forms that diverge from the Hebrew Masoretic text, raising the question whether the NT's canonical OT reference-frame is Hebrew-Tanakh or Greek-Septuagint (which would imply a wider canon including deuterocanonicals); complicates the Protestant 66-book settlement because the apostolic citation pattern is not uniformly Masoretic-Hebrew

Heb.11.35 · complicates · genre: epistle

Key term. ἄλλοι δὲ ἐτυμπανίσθησαν (alloi de etympanisthēsan) G243/G5178

Force. Hebrews 11:35b ('women received their dead by resurrection... others were tortured/beaten to death, refusing release that they might rise to a better life') is widely identified by commentators as an allusion to 2 Maccabees 6-7, the martyrdom of Eleazar and the mother with seven sons under Antiochus IV; 2 Maccabees is in the Catholic and Orthodox OT but not the Protestant; if the allusion is correct, it shows the NT author drawing exemplary content from a deuterocanonical book without thereby canonizing it; complicates the 66-book settlement at the apostolic-usage level, though not at the canonical-list level

Luke.16.16 · for · genre: gospel

Key term. ὁ νόμος καὶ οἱ προφῆται μέχρι Ἰωάννου (ho nomos kai hoi prophētai mechri iōannou) G3551/G4396

Force. Jesus refers to 'the Law and the Prophets' as the standing pre-Johannine canonical structure, a bipartite reference that with Luke 24:44's tripartite reference brackets the Hebrew Tanakh; consistent with the Protestant OT framing of the Hebrew canon as already settled in Jesus' day

Matt.5.17-18 · for · genre: gospel

Key term. τὸν νόμον ἢ τοὺς προφῆτας (ton nomon ē tous prophētas) G3551/G4396

Force. Jesus identifies 'the Law or the Prophets' as the structural categories he came to fulfill, not abolish; the pan-canonical pattern of bipartite (Law/Prophets) and tripartite (Law/Prophets/Psalms) references throughout Synoptic and Pauline material consistently treats the Hebrew Tanakh as the recognized OT canon; supports the Hebrew-canon framing of the Protestant 39-book OT

Rev.22.18-19 · for · genre: apocalyptic

Key term. ἂν τις ἐπιθῇ ἐπ' αὐτά... ἂν τις ἀφέλῃ (ean tis epithē ep' auta... ean tis aphelē) G2007/G851

Force. The closing canonical warning against adding to or taking from 'the words of the prophecy of this book' echoes Deuteronomy 4:2 and Proverbs 30:6; while contextually the immediate referent is Revelation itself, the pan-canonical deposit-guard pattern (yasaph/gara' in Hebrew, epitithēmi/aphaireō in Greek) frames Scripture as a guarded fixed deposit; relevant to the canon-extent question because it supports a closed deposit at both Mosaic and apostolic termini, though it does not itself enumerate which books belong

Deut.4.2 · for · genre: law

Key term. אל תוסיף ולא תגרע... (lo' tosipu... lo' tigre'u) H3254/H1639

Force. Mosaic prohibition against adding to or subtracting from the commanded word; the Hebrew verbs yasaph ('to add') and gara' ('to diminish') establish the pan-canonical deposit-guard pattern that Revelation 22:18-19 echoes; supports a closed-deposit principle in principle, but does not specify which Hebrew books belong to the deposit

Concordance lemmas traversed

G3551, G4396, G5568, G1124, G3051, G2413, G1121, G2315, G129, G6, G2197, G4100, G1802, G4395, G1440, G4002, G5178, G2007, G851, H3254, H1639

complicating texts searched: Yes

Counter-witness traditions

patristic · Athanasius, Festal Letter 39 (367 AD) · affirms · verified

“There are 22 books of the Old Testament. The books of the New Testament are: the four Gospels, Acts, seven Catholic Epistles, fourteen Epistles of Paul, and the Revelation of John. Let no one add to these or take from these.”

patristic · Jerome, Prologus Galeatus (Prologue to Samuel and Kings, c. 391 AD) · affirms · verified

“Whatever is not from these is to be placed among the Apocrypha. Therefore Wisdom, commonly ascribed to Solomon, and the book of Jesus son of Sirach, and Judith and Tobit and the Shepherd are not in the canon.”

catholic_magisterial · Council of Trent, Session IV, Decree on the Canonical Scriptures (April 8, 1546) · denies · verified

“If anyone does not accept as sacred and canonical these books in their entirety with all their parts, as they have been accustomed to be read in the Catholic Church, let him be anathema. [Lists 46 OT books including Tobit, Judith, Wisdom, Sirach, Baruch, 1-2 Maccabees.]”

catholic_magisterial · Catechism of the Catholic Church §120 (1992) · denies · verified

“The Church accepts and venerates as inspired the 46 books of the Old Testament and the 27 books of the New. [The list explicitly names Tobit, Judith, 1-2 Maccabees, Wisdom, Sirach, Baruch among the OT.]” lutheran · Formula of Concord, Epitome, Rule and Norm (1577); Luther's prefaces to Hebrews, James, Jude, Revelation (1522) · affirms · verified

“The prophetic and apostolic writings of the Old and New Testaments are the only rule and norm. [Luther personally rated James as 'an epistle of straw' and placed Hebrews, James, Jude, Revelation at the end of his NT translation, but Lutheran confessional practice has settled on the 66-book Protestant canon, treating the Apocrypha as edifying but not canonical.]”

anglican · 39 Articles, Article VI (1571) · affirms · verified

“In the name of the Holy Scripture we do understand those canonical Books of the Old and New Testament, of whose authority was never any doubt in the Church. [Lists 39 Hebrew OT books; the Apocrypha 'the Church doth read for example of life and instruction of manners, but yet doth it not apply them to establish any doctrine.']” reformed · Westminster Confession of Faith 1.2-1.3 (1647) · affirms · verified

“Under the name of Holy Scripture, or the Word of God written, are now contained all the books of the Old and New Testament. [Lists 39 OT and 27 NT books.] The books commonly called Apocrypha, not being of divine inspiration, are no part of the canon of the Scripture, and therefore are of no authority in the Church of God.”

methodist · Methodist Articles of Religion, Article V (Wesley's 1784 abridgement of the 39 Articles) · affirms · verified

“The Holy Scriptures contain all things necessary to salvation. [Wesley's abridgement retained the 39 Articles' canonical list of the Hebrew 39 OT books and 27 NT books, treating the Apocrypha as non-canonical.]” anabaptist · Mennonite Confession of Dordrecht (1632), Article I; Schleithem Confession (1527) · affirms · verified

“We believe in and confess one eternal, almighty, and incomprehensible God as the same is testified in the Holy Scriptures. [Anabaptist confessions reference the Protestant 66-book canon implicitly through their reliance on Luther's and Zurich Reformers' translations.]” pentecostal · Assemblies of God Statement of Fundamental Truths, Article 1 (1916) · affirms · verified

“The Scriptures, both the Old and New Testaments, are verbally inspired of God and are the revelation of God to man, the infallible, authoritative rule of faith and conduct. [The 66-book Protestant canon is assumed throughout AG materials.]”

eastern_orthodox · Orthodox Church in America, The Orthodox Faith, Volume I; Synod of Jerusalem (1672), Decree 3 · denies · verified

“Following ever the rule of the Catholic Church, we call Sacred Scripture all those which Cyril collected from the Council of Laodicea, and enumerated, adding also those which foolishly and ignorantly some have styled apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, Judith, Tobit, the History of the Dragon, the History of Susanna, the Maccabees, and the Wisdom of Sirach.”

Web sources

supports · category: interlinear · <https://biblehub.com/interlinear/luke/24-44.htm>

“ἐν τῷ νόμῳ Μωϋσέως καὶ τοῖς προφήταις καὶ ψαλμοῖς - tripartite Hebrew canonical reference: Law, Prophets, Psalms”

supports · category: interlinear · <https://biblehub.com/interlinear/luke/11-51.htm>

“ἀπὸ τοῦ αἵματος Ἀβελ ἕως τοῦ αἵματος Ζαχαρίου - Abel-to-Zechariah bracket spanning Genesis to 2 Chronicles, the Hebrew Tanakh endpoints” supports · category: interlinear · <https://biblehub.com/interlinear/romans/3-2.htm>

“ἐπιστεύθησαν τὰ λόγια τοῦ Θεοῦ - the oracles of God were entrusted to the Jewish community, locating canonical custody in Israel”

supports · category: interlinear · https://biblehub.com/interlinear/2_peter/3-16.htm

“τὰς λοιπὰς γραφάς - 'the rest of the Scriptures' includes Paul's letters, placing apostolic writings in the γραφή category” supports · category: primary_repository · <https://biblehub.com/strongs/greek/1124.htm>

“γραφὴ (graphē) G1124: occurs 51 times in NT, always of holy Scripture; usually refers to the Hebrew Scriptures, with 2 Pet 3:16 broadening to include apostolic writings” complicates · category: interlinear · <https://biblehub.com/interlinear/jude/1-14.htm>

“προεφήτευσεν δὲ καὶ τούτοις ἑβδομος ἀπὸ Ἀδὰμ Ἐνὼχ - Jude calls Enoch's words (quoting 1 Enoch 1:9) prophecy, citing a book outside the Protestant canon” supports · category: interlinear · https://biblehub.com/interlinear/2_timothy/3-16.htm

“πᾶσα γραφὴ θεόπνευστος - all Scripture is God-breathed; affirms inspiration of γραφή as a class without enumerating which books”

opposes · category: magisterial · <https://www.usccb.org/offices/new-american-bible/books-bible>

“USCCB lists 46 OT books for the Catholic canon, including Tobit, Judith, 1-2 Maccabees, Wisdom, Sirach, Baruch, plus the 27 NT books, totaling 73 books” supports · category: patristic_archive · <https://www.newadvent.org/fathers/2806039.htm>

“Athanasius Festal Letter 39 (367 AD): 22 OT books (Hebrew enumeration), 27 NT books; 'there are other books not included in the Canon but appointed by the Fathers to be read': Wisdom, Sirach, Esther, Judith, Tobit” supports · category: tradition_primary ·

<https://www.churchofengland.org/prayer-and-worship/worship-texts-and-resources/book-common-prayer/articles-religion>

“39 Articles VI: 'Holy Scripture containeth all things necessary to salvation.' Lists the Hebrew 39 OT books; Apocrypha read 'for example of life' but not 'to establish any doctrine.'” supports · category: tradition_primary · <https://ag.org/Beliefs/Statement-of-Fundamental-Truths>

“AG Article 1: 'The Scriptures, both the Old and New Testaments, are verbally inspired of God and are the revelation of God to man, the infallible, authoritative rule of faith and conduct.'” opposes · category: magisterial ·

https://www.vatican.va/archive/hist_councils/ii_vatican_council/documents/vat-ii_const_19651118_dei-verbum_en.html

“Dei Verbum §11: 'the Books of both the Old and New Testaments, whole and entire, with all their parts, are sacred and canonical' - referring to the Trent canon list including deuterocanonicals”

Flags

- scripture-does-not-enumerate-canon-extent
- apparatus-vs-counter-witness-conflict
- confession-tradition-divergence
- complicating-text-jude-quotes-1-enoch
- complicating-text-nt-uses-septuagint
- deuterocanon-disputed-intra-christian