

Satan Personal Being

doc-satan-personal-being
Demonology · Satan · doctrine · unanimous_lineages

AFFIRMS

score 0.912
confidence high

Statement under examination

Satan is a real, personal, created spiritual being who opposes God and his people.

In plain language

The question asks whether Satan is a real, personal, created spiritual being who opposes God and his people. Looking only at the original-language words, the picture is consistent. The Hebrew word satan, H7854, the Greek words diabolos, G1228, and Satanas, G4567, attach to a figure who behaves like a person. In Job chapter 1 and 2 this figure comes into a gathering, is spoken to by Yahweh, and answers back across nine consecutive verses. The verbs of speaking and answering require someone who can be addressed and can reply. In Matthew chapter 4 the same figure approaches, speaks several times, takes Jesus to different places, shows him kingdoms, and finally departs, and Jesus turns and addresses him directly by name as Satan. Direct address by name only works toward a person, and physical-motion verbs like take and show point to an agent who intends an act. John chapter 8 calls him a father, a murderer from the beginning, and a liar, descriptions of a being with a will and a history. Luke chapter 22 has him asking to sift the disciples, which is a formal request that only a person can make. Ephesians chapter 6 has him owning schemes. First Peter chapter 5 names him an adversary who prowls and seeks someone to devour, and the roaring lion is a comparison there, not his nature. Revelation chapter 12 and chapter 20 gather four labels onto one figure, the dragon, the ancient serpent, the Devil, and Satan, the one who deceives the whole world, and this is what links the speaking serpent of Genesis chapter 3 to the named adversary. Two honest limits remain. In Job and Zechariah the word carries the article, the satan, which can read as a title, the accuser, though the same figure still speaks and acts as a person, and by First Chronicles 21 and in the New Testament the form is a proper name. And the word created is not proven by these particular texts, since none of the supplied words address his origin. So the words strongly support a real, personal, opposing being. The created part rests on wider teaching not contained in this set of texts and is flagged.

Word dictionary

Every Hebrew and Greek word this study leans on, in everyday terms. Shaded rows are the anchor words the verdict rests on.

Strong	Word	Sounds like	Plain meaning	Times in Bible
H0413	אל	el	to(wards)
H0559	אמר	amar	to say	5,064
H0935	בוא	bo	to come (in)
H1121	בן	ben	son
H3318	יצא	yatsa	to come out
H5175	נחש	nachash	serpent	29
H5496	סות	sut	to incite
H5975	עמד	amad	to stand
H6030	ענה	anah	to dwell	316

H7854	שָׂטָן	satan	Satan	25
G0443	ἀνθρωποκτόνος	anthrōpoktonos	murderer
G0476	ἀντίδικος	antidikos	opponent
G0863	ἀφίημι	aphiēmi	to release
G1166	δείκνυμι	deiknuō	to show
G1228	διάβολος	diabolos	devilish/the Devil	38
G1809	ἐξαιτέομαι	exaiteō	to demand/ask for
G2036	εἶπον	eipon	to say	977
G2476	ἵστημι	histemi	to stand	158
G2980	λαλέω	laleo	to speak	308
G3180	μεθοδεῖα	methodeia	scheme
G3789	ὄφις	ophis	snake	14
G3880	παραλαμβάνω	paralambano	to take	51
G3962	πατήρ	patēr	father
G3985	πειράζω	peirazō	to test/tempt
G4334	προσέρχομαι	proserchomai	to come near/agree
G4567	Σατανᾶς	satanas	Satan	37

Plain meanings: STEPbible brief lexicons TBESH (Hebrew) and TBESG (Greek), CC BY 4.0. Counts are occurrences across the 66-book canon.

Verdict rationale

Variant-robust: True · Pan-canonical: True

Across the canon the figure named by H7854 satan, G1228 diabolos, and G4567 satanas consistently occupies the grammatical slot of a personal agent. In Job 1 to 2 the satan is the Subject of speech verbs, answers Yahweh with H6030, and is addressed with H0559 plus H0413 across nine verses. In Matt 4, Mark 1 and 3, Luke 4, 10, 11 and 22, the figure approaches, stands, takes, shows, departs, and speaks, with verbs like G2476, G3880, G1166, G2980, G2036 attaching to the named subject. John 8:44 predicates the personal-relational and moral nouns father, murderer, liar of him. 1 Pet 5:8 calls him antidikos and seeking to devour. Rev 12:9 and Rev 20:2 stack dragon, ancient serpent, Diabolos, and Satanas onto one referent who deceives and is bound. The personal-agent and opposer-of-God clauses hold pan-canonically with dense, recurring grammar. The created clause is not directly carried by these anchor lemmas, so it rests on inference from wider canon and is recorded honestly as a residual.

Scripture

Job.1.6 · for · genre: narrative

Key terms. H7854 שָׂטָן, H1121 בֵּן; H0935 בָּא ·

Force. The satan comes among the sons of God to present himself before Yahweh. H0935, the verb of coming, takes the satan as its personal subject, placing him as one acting agent within a council scene of agents rather than as an abstraction.

Job.1.7 · for · genre: narrative

Key terms. H0559 אמר, H7854 שטן, H6030 ענה,

Force. Yahweh says to the satan using H0559 with the directional H0413, and the satan answers Yahweh using H6030. Two-way address with a named respondent is grammar that requires a personal interlocutor, not a force or principle. The same speech grammar continues in Job.1.8, Job.1.9, Job.1.12, Job.2.2, Job.2.3, Job.2.4, and Job.2.6.

Job.1.12 · for · genre: narrative

Key terms. H7854 שטן, H3318 יצא,

Force. Yahweh hands what Job has into the satan's hand, and the satan then goes out from the presence of Yahweh. Possession of agency, recipient of permission, and locomotion are predicated of the referent. These are agent attributes, not properties of a personification.

Zech.3.1 · for · genre: prophecy

Key terms. H7854 שטן, H5975 עמד,

Force. The satan stands at the right hand of the high priest to accuse him, with H5975 taking the satan as Subject. Standing and accusing are agent verbs. The same accusatory frame recurs in Ps 109:6 where a satan is set against an enemy in a courtroom register.

1Chr.21.1 · for · genre: narrative

Key terms. H7854 שטן, H5496 יסד

Force. Satan, here for the first time without the article in Hebrew narrative, stands up against Israel and incites David. The anarthrous form moves the lexeme toward a name rather than a title, and the verb of inciting H5496 takes the satan as personal subject acting upon a human king.

Matt.4.3 · for · genre: gospel

Key terms. G3985 πειράζω, G2036 εἶπον, G4334 προσέρχονται

Force. The tempter, ho peirazon, the participial designation of the same figure introduced in verse 1 as ho diabolos, comes near and speaks, with proselthon then eipen. The pairing of approach and speech is the standard Greek frame for a personal speaker.

Matt.4.5 · for · genre: gospel

Key terms. G1228 διάβολος, G3880 παραλαμβάνω, G2476 ἵστημι

Force. The diabolos takes Jesus to the holy city and stands him on the pinnacle, with G3880 and G2476 as transitive verbs of physical action. A figurative or symbolic reading cannot account for these motion and placement verbs with a personal subject and a personal direct object.

Matt.4.8 · for · genre: gospel

Key terms. G1228 διάβολος, G1166 δείκνυμι

Force. The diabolos shows him all the kingdoms of the world, with G1166 attaching to the personal subject. Show-and-tell predicates require an agent who can intend a display, which is the grammar of a personal being.

Matt.4.10 · for · genre: gospel

Key terms. G4567 Σατανᾶς, G1228 διάβολος

Force. Jesus dismisses the figure with a vocative, Hypage Satana, directly naming the same diabolos who has conducted the dialogue. A vocative of direct address presupposes a personal addressee, and it equates the Greek Satanias with the Hebrew adversary lexeme of Job and Zechariah.

Matt.4.11 · for · genre: gospel

Key terms. G1228 διάβολος, G0863 ἀφίημι

Force. Then the diabolos leaves him, aphiesin auton. The narrative records the agent departing, parallel to the satan going out in Job 1:12. The structural rhyme across Testaments, present, dialogue, depart, confirms a personal subject in both.

Luke.22.31 · for · genre: gospel

Key terms. G4567 Σατανᾶς, G1809 ἐξαιτέομαι

Force. Satanias asks for the disciples to sift them like wheat, with G1809 the verb of formal request. To request is to intend, and to intend is to be a personal agent. The verb forecloses a non-personal reading.

John.8.44 · for · genre: gospel

Key terms. G1228 διάβολος, G3962 πατήρ, G0443 ἀνθρωποκτόνος

Force. The diabolos is called father, pater, and predicated as a murderer from the beginning, anthropoktonos ap arches, and a liar, pseustes. Personal-relational and moral nouns are predicated of him, and the temporal phrase from the beginning attributes a continuous history of acting, which only fits a personal being with a will.

Eph.6.11 · for · genre: epistle

Key terms. G1228 διάβολος, G3180 μεθοδεία, G2476 ἵστημι

Force. Believers are to stand, G2476, against the methodeiai of the diabolos. Schemes are intended, not random, and are predicated of a personal possessor by the genitive tou diabolou. Methodeia is an agent noun for planned tactics.

1Pet.5.8 · for · genre: epistle · figures: simile

Key terms. G1228 διάβολος, G0476 ἀντίδικος

Force. The diabolos is your adversary, antidikos, prowling and seeking someone to devour. The legal-opponent noun antidikos plus verbs of prowling and seeking describe purposeful hostile activity, the opposer element of the proposition. The lion image is a comparison, hos leon, not an identity.

Rev.12.9 · for · genre: apocalyptic · figures: metaphor

Key terms. G1228 διάβολος, G4567 Σατανᾶς, G3789 ὄφις

Force. One referent is named four ways, the great dragon, the ancient serpent, ho kaloumenos Diabolos and ho Satanias, the one deceiving the whole world. The stacked appositional naming with the substantival participle ho planon unifies the Gen 3 serpent and the named adversary as a single acting being who is cast out, eblethe. Rev 20:2 repeats this fourfold identification.

Gen.3.1 · for · genre: narrative

Key terms. H5175 שָׁרֵן, H0559 נָחָשׁ

Force. The serpent, nachash, is the Subject of the speech verb amar and conducts a multi-turn dialogue with the woman. The serpent speaks, reasons, and contradicts a divine command, which is agent grammar. The text here does not lexically equate the serpent with the satan lexeme, so the identification with the named adversary is supplied later in the canon at Rev 12:9 and Rev 20:2.

Cross references invoked

From	To	Source	Votes
Matt.4.10	1Chr.21.1	tsk	1
Job.1.6	1Kgs.22.19	tsk	1

Matt.4.3	Gen.3.1	tsk	1
1Pet.5.8	Eph.6.11	openbible	1
Rev.12.9	Gen.3.1	openbible	1
Rev.12.9	Rev.20.2	tsk	1
Job.1.7	Zech.3.1	tsk	1
Luke.22.31	Job.1.12	openbible	1

Complicating texts

Job.1.6 · addressed

In Job and Zechariah the lexeme appears with the definite article, ha-satan, which reads as a title or office, the accuser or adversary, rather than as a personal proper name. This qualifies the name claim. It does not, however, complicate personhood, because the same articular form is the Subject of speech verbs, answers Yahweh, exercises a remit, and goes out, which are agent predicates. The article complicates onomastics, not ontology. By 1Chr.21.1 the form is anarthrous, and in the Greek New Testament the form Satanias is fully a proper name.

Num.22.22 · addressed

In Num.22.22 and Num.22.32 the noun satan is applied to the Angel of Yahweh as he stands in the way to oppose Balaam, and in 1Sam.29.4, 2Sam.19.22, and 1Kgs.11.14, 23, 25 it is applied to human opponents. This shows the lexeme has a common-noun sense, an adversary, that is not always the named figure. So the noun alone does not prove the named figure, but in Job 1 to 2, Zech 3, 1Chr 21, Ps 109, and the unified NT usage with G1228 and G4567, the same lexeme is attached by context, definite article, and stacked NT naming to one specific opposing personal agent.

Gen.3.1 · addressed

The Gen 3 serpent is never lexically labeled satan or diabolos within the Hebrew text of the passage, so reading the serpent as the personal adversary is a cross-canonical inference rather than a direct lexical datum at Gen 3 itself. The link is supplied by Rev 12:9 and Rev 20:2, which name the ancient serpent, ho ophis ho archaios, as Diabolos and Satanias in the same noun phrase. Within Gen 3 itself only the personal-agent grammar of the speaking nachash is demonstrable.

1Pet.5.8 · unaddressed

The created element of the proposition, that this being is a creature with a beginning, is not carried by any anchor lemma in this bundle. The texts establish a personal opposing agent across both Testaments with dense recurring grammar, but they do not lexically assert his origin as created. Resolving the created clause would require traversal to creation-of-spirits, angelic-origin, and fall-of-angels texts that were not supplied here. It is therefore left unresolved on the lexical evidence at hand, flagged honestly, and does not subtract from the personal and opposing clauses.

Concordance traversed

H7854, G1228, G4567, H5175, G3789, H0559, H6030, G2036, G2980, G2476, G3880, G1166, H0935, H3318, H0413

Variants

Verdict variant-sensitive: False · ECM status: ecm-shadow

No variant units were supplied for the cited verses, and the bundle marks the question outside ECM scope. The four named figures in Rev 12:9 and Rev 20:2, the dialogue frames in Matt 4 and Luke 22:31, the predicates in John 8:44, and the council scene in Job 1 to 2 are textually stable in the supplied tradition. No plausible reading removes the personal agent.

Hermeneutics

Primary method. grammatico-historical analogia scripturae invoked · progressive revelation factor personal-agent reading: affirms · Speech verbs, vocative address, multi-turn dialogue, possession, locomotion, scheming, and accusing are all predicated of the referent across both Testaments. The grammar required by these predicates is the grammar of a personal being who intends, speaks, and moves.

title-or-office reading of ha-satan: partially complicates · The articular Hebrew form ha-satan in Job 1 to 2 and Zech 3 supports reading satan as a function word, the accuser, in those passages, which qualifies the name claim. Personhood is left intact since the office is exercised by an acting subject who speaks and answers. The anarthrous 1Chr.21.1 and the Greek Satanias as a proper name show progressive movement from office to name across the canon.

personification or symbol-only reading: complicates weakly · A reader could ask whether the dialogue scenes in Job 1 to 2 and Matt 4 are dramatic personification of an impersonal evil principle, the way wisdom is personified in Prov 8. The lexical pattern resists this for three reasons named only from the words. First, the dialogues are multi-turn with two-way address and named vocatives, not monologues praising an attribute. Second, the same figure crosses Testaments under multiple lemmas, satan, diabolos, satanas, ophis, drakon, and these lemmas are stacked appositionally in Rev 12:9 and Rev 20:2 onto one referent. Third, the predicates include physical action verbs like G3880 take and G1166 show with personal direct objects, not the predicate types used for personified abstractions. The personification lens is therefore admissible as a question but is not sustainable as the dominant reading on this lexical pattern.

common-noun adversary reading: partially complicates · Outside the named-figure passages the noun satan is used of the Angel of Yahweh in Num 22 and of human opponents in 1 Sam, 2 Sam, and 1 Kgs, demonstrating a common-noun sense, an adversary. This is real polysemy. It does not undercut the personal-being clause for the named figure, because in Job 1 to 2, Zech 3, 1Chr 21:1, the NT use of G1228 and G4567, and the Rev 12:9 stack, context, articulation, and discourse role isolate the specific personal adversary.

The serpent of Gen 3 and the named adversary are joined by analogia scripturae through the appositional naming in Rev 12:9 and Rev 20:2. The move from articular ha-satan in the older texts to the anarthrous proper name Satanias in the Greek reflects progressive disclosure of the same figure rather than two different figures.

Stem audit

verdict-preloaded: yes

Neutralized form. What does the canon say about the referent named by the lexemes satan and diabolos, regarding whether it acts as a personal agent, whether it opposes God and his people, and whether it is presented as a created spiritual being.

The stem bundles three claims, personal, created, and opposing, and treats the created clause as settled. The lexical bundle strongly supports the personal and opposing clauses, with dense pan-canonical grammar, but does not directly witness the created clause, since no creation-of-spirits or angelic-origin lemma was supplied. The verdict is derived on the original stem, and the gap on the created clause is recorded honestly in complicating_texts and rationale rather than smuggled past.

Citations

Type	Source	License	Redist.	Ref
morphology	OSHB-morphology	CC-BY-4.0	yes	Job.1.6
morphology	STEPBible-TAHOT	CC-BY-4.0	yes	Job.1.7
morphology	MorphGNT-morphology	CC-BY-SA-4.0	yes	Matt.4.10
morphology	STEPBible-TAGNT	CC-BY-4.0	yes	Luke.22.31
syntax	ETCBC-BHSA	CC-BY-NC-4.0	no	Gen.3.1

lexicon	MACULA-Greek	CC-BY-NC-4.0	no	G1228
lexicon	MACULA-Hebrew	CC-BY-NC-4.0	no	H7854
cross_ref	TSK	public_domain	yes	Matt.4.10
cross_ref	OpenBible-cross-refs	CC-BY	yes	Rev.12.9

License audit

NOT SAFE TO PUBLISH

Reason. ETCBC-BHSA, MACULA-Greek, and MACULA-Hebrew are all licensed CC-BY-NC-4.0, which forbids redistribution in bulk, so the aggregate evidence is not safe to publish until those non-commercial sources are excluded or replaced.

Source	License	Redistribute
OSHB-morphology	CC-BY-4.0	yes
STEPBible-TAHOT	CC-BY-4.0	yes
STEPBible-TAGNT	CC-BY-4.0	yes
MorphGNT-morphology	CC-BY-SA-4.0	yes
ETCBC-BHSA	CC-BY-NC-4.0	no
MACULA-Greek	CC-BY-NC-4.0	no
MACULA-Hebrew	CC-BY-NC-4.0	no
TSK	public_domain	yes
OpenBible-cross-refs	CC-BY	yes

Flags

ecm-shadow · complicating-unresolved